Mayor White responds to critics, p. 3

Threatening a recall

Citizens for Good Government launches attack

Livingston, Brooks counterpunch CCGG

By PAUL WOLF

TWO OF three council members under fire described the Carmel Citizens for Good Government's attack as distorted, inaccurate and based the "political and personal agendas" of a select few.

Meanwhile, the third council member, Mayor Ken White, said he couldn't comment extensively until he had a number of points in the letter clarified.

"No one had the courtesy to come to me and explain what this means," he said referring to threat of citizens "housecleaning" the city council.

"I find this arrogant," said Brooks in a phone interview. "I am going to keep this in the perspective: This is a group of 12 people who represent themselves and whose purposes have never been defined."

BARBARA LIVINGSTON

BARBARA BROOKS

"These people," said Livingston in a written statement, "are painting a picture of me that is not true. They insinuate I do not get along with Councilmembers Coniglio and Fischer. That is a lie."

Livingston added: "I'm a new member of the council, and I had nothing to do with past council decisions. Why am I being targeted?"

On the substance of the group's criticisms, Brooks had three basic points:

First, where certain statements may have had merit — like on the question of downsizing city government and revising procedures for selecting planning commissioners — city staff and elected officials are already busy working to make improvements. "They are trying to take credit for what the city is doing," Brooks said.

Second, some of the statements are misleading or "inaccurate," she argued. For example, on Rio Park, the letter does not recognize that the acquisition was made before either of the councilwomen came on board, and, in fact, Councilman Bob Fischer voted for the acquisition.

Third, while the CCGG demands the council move forward on committee work, it is selective, showing a political bias, Brook said. For instance, it asks for more review on the 2016 Committee report because it doesn't align with the CCGG's political orientation, the councilwoman argued.

Plan calls for restoring 'heart of Carmel'

By PAUL WOLF

SUGGESTING A recall movement may be around the corner, the Carmel Citizens for Good Government has sent three city council members a six-point plan of action to restore responsible management of city affairs.

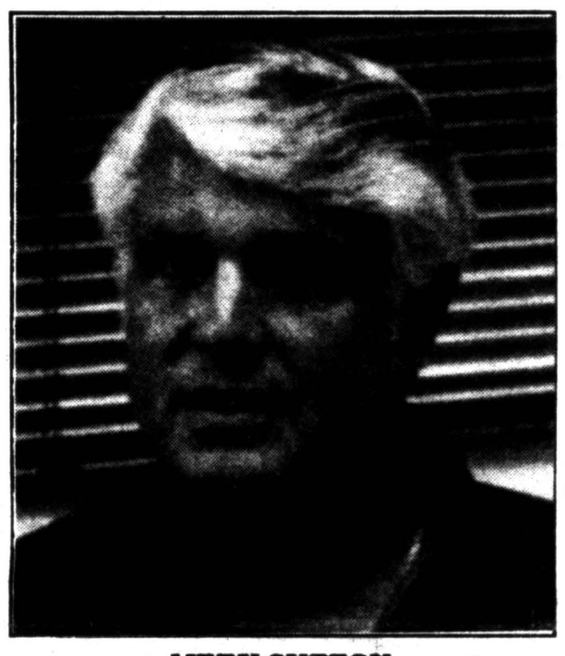
The issuance of the letter from the 12-member CCGG — a political action committee formed in February — automatically thrusts it into the role of organized opposition to the council majority.

Its intent is to address "the current shaky, unhappy situation in town as quickly as possible," the CCGG announced in a prepared statement issued by its president, Merv Sutton.

Also made public was a copy of the five-page letter addressed to Mayor Ken White and Councilmembers Barbara Brooks and Barbara Livingston, in which the CCGG outlines its six-point plan of action.

The plan, made public Tuesday after a joint council-planning commission meeting, is dubbed "Restore the Heart of Carmel." It demands the study and "support" of the plan by the three council members within 30 days.

"Otherwise," the letter states, "it raises questions of your continued ability to serve this city in a fair and balanced manner expected by the voters who elected you. We are confident that Carmel-by-the-Sea voters will support a housecleaning of the council in the absence of immediate action."



MERV SUTTON

The six elements of the plan call for:

• A balanced budget, which includes "no more juggling of reserve funds or accounting techniques to make the budget look balanced." Among other things, the plan calls for the preparation of a 10-

Voice of Carmel survey calls for city payroll cuts

By PAUL WOLF

CARMEL VOTERS and property owners overwhelmingly believe the city should reduce the size of its payroll and fringe benefits, and should not resort to boosting revenues as a means of balancing the budget.

Those were key results of a Voice of Carmel survey, released Tuesday. The mailer, which asked four questions, was sent to 4,988 addresses in Carmel-by-the-Sea, and 1,052 postcards were returned — a 21 percent response.

Respondents also overwhelmingly expressed support (68 percent) for the city's paying down its Rio Park debt by $500,000 to reduce its annual interest payments, a plan that would delay the construction of recreation facilities at the recently acquired city open space.

In addition, respondents were generally divided — 41 percent supporting, 44 percent opposing — on whether the city should prevent residential development on the remaining lots in Pescadero Canyon through a land swap with the property owners.

The Voice is a public benefit corporation, consisting of an eight-member board, conducts two to three surveys a year and presents the results to the Carmel City Council.

When, in March, the Voice of Carmel presented the results of the last survey, it drew criticism from a majority of city council members, who said the questions showed the pollsters' political bias. But, this time around, at least two council critics were initially pleased with the handling of the survey.

"I'm very pleased with this one," said Councilwoman Barbara Brooks. "The questions were very slanted the last time."

She said she had objected to asking questions after decisions had been made, rather than before council actions. "It was more scolding than helping," Brooks said.

Similarly, Councilwoman Barbara Livingston said, "I have no disagreement with the way the questions were handled. I thought this one was better — the way the questions were phrased."

Here are the four questions, and the results:

• "To balance the city budget, should

Words of hope, or hopeless words?

"I WANT to lead the city out of the chasm of bickering and into the road to communication and consensus."

How wonderful are our words of hope when we are campaigning for mayor. They have a sort of evangelical ring to them, especially when spoken in the embrace of one's own political support group — the Carmel Residents Association.

The words of hope are, of course, those of Ken White, rhetorically uttered on March 26 at a CRA-sponsored community forum.

Ultimately, by a 167-vote margin, the people of Carmel said, "Yes, we will follow you down that road to communication." And they waited for their new mayor, so full of hope, to lead them. That was nearly five months ago, and they are still waiting.

But, in the character of a cheerleader full of conjured up spirit rather than a community leader with responsible foresight, Mayor White has chosen to stand at the shoulder of the road to communication and wave everyone on ahead of him.

That's not our idea of extricating our city "out of the chasm of bickering." It is more like playing it safe, thinking no one will know the difference between cheering the team on, and actually taking the field.

It's been 148 days since we first suggested the mayor and his CRA cronies resign from the very group that is digging the chasm of bickering he wants to bridge.

Defending Coniglio, Fischer

Dear Editor:

In my more than 20 years as a resident of the Carmel area, I have attended many city council and planning commission meetings and participated on city committees. I have tried to maintain an impartial, objective position with regard to city concerns and have refrained from becoming a member of any group, including the Carmel Residents Association, Voice of Carmel, Carmel Citizens for Good Government, in order to maintain my objectivity.

However, I feel that I must respond to the recent inflammatory statements of the CRA which has made unwarranted accusations against two long-time residents and council members, Bob Fischer and Phil Coniglio with references to McCarthyism and witch hunts.

Bob Fischer and Phil Coniglio are sincere, dedicated members of the city council who have only the best interests of Carmel at heart and who give much of their time to seeing that Carmel remains the unique city that it is.

I thought that I had recently seen the beginnings of a spirit of cooperation between the CRA, CBA, other groups, and Carmel residents as well as business interests to work together. Could I have been sadly mistaken? Mayor White ran for election with an objective of being a peacemaker between the interests of the residents and business community. I continue to support him in this.

In these times of economic hardship and the difficult budget decisions facing the city, it is time for all of us to begin to work together for what is good for Carmel, its preservation as the unique city that it is and not engage in petty name-calling.

Rolle responds

Dear Editor:

Calls for city council members to renounce their Carmel Resident Association memberships must be based on one or both of these premises:

1. The CRA purpose and focus are not in the interests of Carmel and its well-being.

2. Elected officials who are CRA members are in the thrall of the CRA and cannot be relief on to act fairly and independently on the merits of decisions before them.

Both premises are false.

1. The purpose of the CRA as stated in its by-laws is the same exact wording affirming residential values contained in the 63-year-old city ordinance which hangs on the wall of the council chamber for all to see. If the purpose is the problem, that's the issue, not the CRA.

2. The second premise is demeaning to these council members who have served Carmel in various capacities over the years and served our city well as CRA members.

We have enough acrimony and specious charges in the national elections. We don't need it here in Carmel. As Rodney King stated so well after the Los Angeles riots, "Can't we all get along?"

Lou Rolle

Carmel Valley Road

Dear Editor:

Here's the scenario: elected officials listen to hours and hours of public debate; receive numerous documents, studies, opinion polls and reports; then proceed to pass legislation which angers almost everyone, proposed to spend public money on improvements not needed or desired by anyone, and fails to address the original problem altogether! Are we talking about Washington, D.C.? Sacramento? No! We're talking about the board of supervisors in Salinas on Aug. 25, dealing with the questions of moratorium and financing of improvements to Carmel Valley Road.

Their solution?

No. 1— Impose a hefty fee temporarily on new development only (this to avoid a true moratorium) which results in a de facto moratorium on all but those wealthy enough to buy their way out of this constraint;

No. 2 — Apply this fee beyond the Carmel Valley Master Plan boundaries (it's only half a slap to Cachagua);

No. 3 — Pay for safety improvements only out of whatever fees are paid (including three pedestrian overpasses in Mid Valley) which will not improve traffic flows sufficient to avoid moratorium.

Incredible, isn't it, how they managed to miss the target on every single point! Not in anyone's wildest dreams is it expected new development fees will be paid sufficient to build any of these safety improvements! Did someone forget there is and will continue to be a moratorium already in place within the Carmel Valley Master Plan area? This means only those people outside the targeted planning area who are still financially able to develop their property will be paying for improvements to mid Carmel Valley Road, which will not solve the problem that caused the traffic trigger in the first place! Slick, hey?

There is no correlation between a house being built in Cachagua and a pedestrian overpass to Carmelo School. Even the strongest proponents of shutting down all development in Carmel Valley admit this latest manifestation of bad legislation and bad government will not stand the slightest legal challenge. How much of our money will the Supes waste this time in pointless litigation? It seems to me, we simply cannot afford any more substandard government.

• Revision of the current process by which planning commissioners are picked.

• Reducing the size and cost of city government — including the possible combining of police and fire departments, use of volunteer services in the library and use of "outside contractors to provide city services where possible.

• Hasten the movement of committee reports, surrounding the Landlord-Tenant Committee and the parking committee.

• Move forward on downtown zoning simplification.

• Restore "civility" in Carmel, setting standards "that respect the rights of the individual and that promote courtesy, harmony and balance."

Reading between lines

CCGG President Merv Sutton, when contacted by The Carmel Pine Cone Tuesday evening, said he would let the document speak for itself. When pressed, however, he said he would not disagree with a reporter's interpretation that the term "housecleaning" suggested recall.

Indeed, many of the criticisms put forward in the letter pointed to issues that did not begin in April, when Livingston joined the council and White ascended to the position of mayor.

But the letter attacks the majority of the Carmel City Council on everything from the city's financial management and planning commission appointment procedures, to its perceived slow speed following up on committee reports and the council majority's "sanction" of the activities of the Carmel Residents Association.

Addressed to the three council members, the letter paints White, Livingston and Brooks with the same CRA brush — a practice the three have bitterly condemned in recent weeks.

Whether the council members consider it justified or not, the CCGG's own objections to the CRA's handling of certain issues recently have been lodged with council members who hold membership.

The letter puts a hedge between the three and Councilmembers Phil Coniglio and Bob Fischer, who do not belong to the CRA. In fact, the letter demands the three "improve your relationships with Bob Fischer and Phil Coniglio,"

It charges the three council members "tacitly endorsed" the CRA's bitter attack of Fischer and Coniglio when the residents' group slammed the two for rejecting Louis Rolle to the planning commission. Fischer and Coniglio acknowledged they blocked Rolle's nomination primarily on the basis of his CRA affiliation. CRA officials and some council members cited discrimination and "guilt-by-association" on Fischer and Coniglio's part.

Dramatic debut

The letter is the CCGG's dramatic debut into the hard-hitting arena of Carmel politics, and it represents a departure for the group, if not for certain members who have been critics as individuals.

When, in February, the CCGG first made its mission public, it portrayed itself as a new countervailing force to the well-established CRA. The committee had been established out of the core membership of the apolitical Voice of Carmel.

CCGG seemed poised to do battle. Like the CRA, it planned on endorsing candidates, attracting a membership and taking political stands. But these things never came to pass during the spring election period.

The new political action committee, ironically, kept a low profile. Whereas initially it defined itself as representing businesses interests primarily, it soon threw out assuming any limits on its identity, almost presenting itself as an educational group. Today, members say they "represent all of Carmel."

"We stay to the middle of the road," said Sutton recently.

But, last month, the political action committee already showed signs of becoming more out-spoken and political in its aims.

In conjunction with the Voice of Carmel, the CCGG conducted a private critique of the city's financial management over the past five years, concluding that the city was making a habit of dipping into its reserves to balance the budget. While its opinions were implied rather than stated, the private study was a criticism of the city administration's budget practices.

In response to the study, Mayor White came up with the idea of establishing a five-member citizens' budget committee — which is actually one of the things the CCGG's six-point plan demands.

Thorn in their side

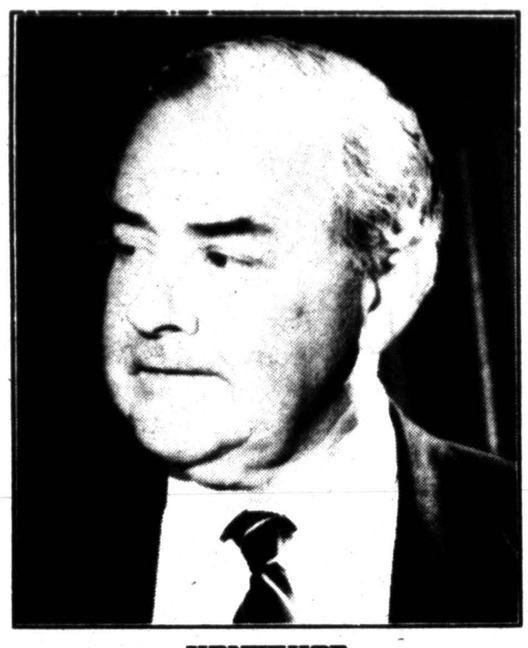
The accompanying press statement issued by the CCGG suggested it intended to be a thorn in the council's side.

"The CCGG is grateful for the many expressions of support from a variety of residents and property owners, old and new, who share the opinion that our city government urgently needs to focus on fiscal responsibility, neighborliness and good decisions making. It's time to get to work."

The letter accused the council's majority of having "failed to listen to the people...Growing dissatisfaction and tension throughout the town calls for immediate solutions. Therefore, we have prepared a realistic plan of action for the betterment of the community."

White to CRA critics: 'nothing better to talk about?'

By PAUL WOLF



KENWHITE

RESPONDING TO persistent critics who want him to give up his membership in the Carmel Residents Association, Mayor Ken White said he would "never go overboard" to prove he wasn't in any faction's pocket.

"And should I give up my CBA (Carmel Business Association) membership too?" White asked rhetorically. "I send them (the CBA) money. Should I stop? To prove something means I'd have to go overboard. To prove something, I'd be going overboard in another direction."

He said he doesn't get calls from the CRA or anybody else telling him how to vote.

White stressed he is less interested in people liking one another than in their being able to sit down and solve problems. That, he said, has become difficult in the current climate.

The mayor made clear that not only is he displeased with the tireless "guilt-by-association" attacks of CRA critics, but that they have been "a distraction" to the important issues facing the community.

White wishes the community — and the media — would spend more time talking about downtown zoning and parking, the draft historic preservation ordinance and long-term budget planning.

Family mud fight

"You've got a family mud fight in town that is interfering with our coming to closure on the major issues," White said.

Critics of White and Councilwomen Barbara Brooks and Barbara Livingston have declared all three should resign their CRA affiliations. All three have been offended by what they see as a ploy by their political opponents.

White suggested the fighting has more to do with personalities than issues. While he has presented himself as a conciliator, he made an important distinction: "I am not trying to make people like each other. My job is to keep people focused on resolving some of the major issues. This community needs settlement and closure on."

He added; "I see my job as trying to be as fair and balanced as I can. I've never had the CRA call me and tell me what position to take."

On the question of why some people have been so persistent about the CRA resignation issue, White said succinctly, "I have no idea why, but I know its detrimental to Carmel."

Two Barbaras punch back at CCGG move

Brooks said she is not troubled by an ultimatum or hints at a recall. "If I don't have the support of the community, then I don't belong on the council, and I have no problem with that."

Brooks responded to the letter's insistence council member's don't put "self-interest and political ambition" above the community's well-being, saying she doesn't "really have any political ambitions," but questions whether that is not what is driving the CCGG.

CUSD escapes severe budget cutbacks

By SCOTT BREARTON

CARMEL UNIFIED School District, though not unscathed, will escape the worst of state budget cutbacks, according to CUSD Superintendent Vance Baldwin.

"We aren't impacted nearly as bad as most districts," said Baldwin at a district meeting Sept. 10. "The impact on our district is something we can live with."

Baldwin and Judy Long, director of business and support services for the district, attended a budget workshop in San Jose Sept. 9, conducted by School Services California (SSC). The workshop was designed to help educators statewide interpret the newly enacted legislation.

Though it was considered flawed, state legislators adopted a $57 billion budget act after the 64-day budget deadlock finally ended Sept. 9.

Lawmakers restored $512 million in school funds earlier vetoed by Governor Pete Wilson, and the status of these funds are still in question due to technical flaws. The errors will be corrected when lawmakers reconvene in December, according to Wilson.

In all, Baldwin said, "Public education in California came out pretty well."

The biggest cutbacks will be made in the funding of "categorical programs," according to SSC. For Carmel Unified, cuts will be felt in the following areas: regional occupational centers and programs, 10th-grade counseling, transportation, school improvement programs, economic impact aid, programs for the gifted, adult and special education, vocational training, instructional materials, staff and child development, and deferred maintenance.

Long said California schools can expect a 2.3 percent cut in funding for these programs. Schools will also face an estimated 3.76 percent reduction in statewide ADA (average daily attendance) growth funds.

"The end result is that the funding for most categorical programs will decline by about 6 percent (per pupil)," Long said.

There is expected to be no state cost-of-living adjustment to the districts for the 1992-93 fiscal year, added Long. For the second consecutive year, the state has failed to grant a cost-of-living increase, and districts will be forced to absorb the costs of inflation for everything from salaries to materials.

Long emphasized that her information is based on SSC interpretation of the new legislation, not necessarily the bottom line.

Long said the district's total operating budget for the 1992-93 school year was approximately $14 million.

Lesson taught

And the district is also prepared to return some of the county taxes it had counted on after the sale of Pebble Beach Co. went through in September, 1990.

After 24 days of public tax hearings between the county and Pebble Beach Co. — resulting from this year's sale of Pebble Beach — the total property value was finally settled Sept. 9 at $600 million.

Based on the new assessed value, CUSD must return between $150,000 and $200,000 in county tax revenue for the 1991-92 school year. The $600 million assessment was a compromise between the county's June appraisal of $723 million and Pebble Beach Company's estimate of $380 million.

CUSD to research River School relocation issues

By SCOTT BREARTON

CARMEL SCHOOL officials have approved the second phase of a study designed to examine the feasibility of selling Carmel River School and using proceeds to build a new elementary school on a 10-acre parcel adjacent to Carmel Middle School on Carmel Valley Road.

"The results of that first investigation indicate that we should move forward," said Superintendent Vance Baldwin, who added, "We want to be a little more specific."

"Phase II" of the study, approved at a district meeting Sept. 10, will involve detailed research on issues surrounding the proposed River School move. The cost for the second phase will not exceed $4,000, according to Carmel Unified School District board members.

Many factors involved

Enshallah, a consulting firm hired by the district, will examine traffic constraints at the school site and at Highway 1, access, sewer capacity, water availability, building requirements and the district's educational needs.

The firm will also examine in more detail the potential constraints on development of the Carmel River School property identified in the first phase of the study.

The firm plans to continue meeting with county officials to identify their concerns. Also, consultants will meet with the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and CalAm to discuss the possibility of transferring River School's current water allocation to the new site.

They will meet with River School neighbors to gather their opinions. Board members suggest there may be some interest at Mission Ranch in buying the Carmel River property.

Enshallah will also investigate the cost and time involved in pursuing a general plan change and rezoning — which any change in use would call for.

Board member Frank Pinney said he thought there should be "some degree of involvement with local people," urging the creation of an informal advisory committee so neighbors in the River School area feel they have access to the district.

"If this rolls, there are definitely going to be people in the community who will want to have a shot at it," Pinney said, referring to local developers and realtors.

The final phases

Baldwin outlined the final phases of the feasibility study, should they be implemented: Phase three would involve implementing the recommendations based on information gathered in the previous phase. In phase four, the board would prepare the property for marketing. Phase five would entail "final marketing for contract of sale." The final phase would involve following all contracts to escrow.

According to Baldwin, Enshallah's fee in phases three through six would amount to three percent of River School's gross sale price.

Baldwin reiterated that the district's contract with the consulting firm is fully revocable. "If at any time the district determines the services are no longer required," he said, "we can notify the firm and discontinue work."

Schools escape severe cuts

for the possibility of a lower assessment and had set aside the $200,000.

"It looks like they'll take back between $150,000 to 200,000." She said the district would receive a net $750,000 for the 1991-92 tax year based on the $600 million assessment.

Calling it a "lesson taught," Baldwin said: "It looked pretty good at first. We had the money in our checking account and it left us."

Lottery revenue down

Baldwin said lottery revenue was down considerably from previous years, amounting to only $77 per student. He said four years ago the district was getting about $178 per student. The reductions translate into $200,000 less for CUSD than it received during the 1988-89 school year.

Long said school districts haven't gotten their hopes up as far as lottery funds are concerned.

"The most it ever amounted to was 2 to 3 percent of a school district's budget," she said.

The cuts, though not particularly severe, come at a time when district enrollment is increasing.

Total district enrollment as of Sept. 8 was 2289, a 3.3 percent increase over the average enrollment during the 1991-92 school year. The kindergarten classes at Captain Cooper and Tularcitos have the highest student-teacher ratios, nearly 30 to 1.

"The district finds itself in a favorable financial position," Long said. "However, the school district will proceed with caution in order to take into account the uncertainties in school finance."

Three bank robberies this year; Wells Fargo is the latest

By PAUL WOLF

CARMEL POLICE are investigating the third bank robbery to occur within the city this year.

At about 2:04 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 12, a lone adult male entered Wells Fargo Bank on San Carlos Street, approached a teller with a note, indicated he had a weapon concealed under his clothing, and made off with an undisclosed amount of money.

It was the third bank robbery in eight months, and the fifth reported incident of armed robbery within the same span, according to Carmel Det. Pete Poitras.

"Bank robberies are a rare occurrence in Carmel," he said. "We usually don't have one a year; this is quite unusual.

The person connected with the two previous cases of bank robbery this year is now serving time in federal prison.

The teller, according to Poitras, provided a detailed description of the bank robber: "Oriental or Philippino, between the ages of 18 and 20, with a "dark, pockmarked complexion, wearing black horn-rimmed glasses with clear, square lenses."

Poitras couldn't elaborate on leads and suspects for the investigation now in progress. He did appear optimistic, however, noting that the city — which gets help from the Federal Bureau of Investigation on such federal crimes — has a strong track record on catching bank robbers.

The two earlier bank robberies were carried out at Great Western and, again, Wells Fargo.

Because of bank policies, Poitras would not disclose the amount of money taken. Nevertheless, he said, "It wasn't a significant amount of money."

The Plaza Cafe incident

Meanwhile, another incident dating back to Saturday two weeks earlier, Aug. 29, has been cleared.

The crime at the Carmel Plaza Cafe has been reclassified from armed robbery to grand theft. And two young Monterey women have been charged.

A 21-year-old cashier began as victim and soon became suspect — along with her 24-year-old roommate. Both now have been charged with grand theft.

That Saturday evening, the restaurant cashier, Tonya Humiston, 21, recounted how a woman showed her a pistol in her handbag, and Humiston reported she responded by giving her $3,200 from the cash register.

No words were exchanged. It was a silent "robbery" that took place during a bustling evening at the restaurant.

"The whole thing didn't wash," Poitras said, recalling his initial perception. "Her story didn't feel right. The way in which she said the robbery occurred just didn't seem plausible."

Subsequent investigation carved a trail to Humiston's Monterey roommate, Mary Marcuson, 24, the alleged accomplice in the joint robbery.

Carmel Middle School welcomes new teachers

By SCOTT BREARTON

CARMEL MIDDLE School administrators have hired nine new full-time faculty members in what Principal Karl Pallastrini is calling the biggest faculty turnover in his nine years at CMS.

"This is my ninth year here and I've never seen this kind of turnover," Pallastrini said.

Citing the youth and enthusiasm of his new instructors, including a husband and wife "teaching team" fresh out of college, Pallastrini said he views the staffing changes as a plus for both the school and the district.

"It's becoming an increasingly younger staff," he said. "The way I look at it, they are the future of the district."

Several factors were mentioned as reasons for the numerous vacancies, and retirement topped the list.

"We had a lot of teachers at the cusp of retirement," Pallastrini said.

Some teachers took the "Golden Handshake," an attractive early retirement incentive program designed to save the district money. Others took leaves of absence, resigned, or changed schools, according to Pallastrini. Increased enrollment at the middle school also warranted the additions.

Parents are really excited about the change too. Said Pallastrini: "They (the new instructors) have been really warmly received."

Pallastrini said he was pleased to be able to attract quality people in spite of the area's high cost of living. He said his hiring team, which included both teacher and parent representatives, began interviewing in early spring. There were nearly 100 applicants for each position, according to Pallastrini.

"I think it's great to be able to give these young people the opportunity of beginning their teaching careers in Carmel," he said.

The new faculty members and their positions are: Pat Robel, language arts; Laura Robel physical education, health, language arts; Dawn Dufresne, social studies, language arts, health; Nicki Greco, 8th-grade language arts; Carol Hart, librarian; Karen Huntington, secretary; Gayle Fairbanks, asst. principal; Janice Young, math, language arts, special education; and Wendy Herron, math and computers.

Kay Anderson, former teacher, has moved to the counseling department.

Rented wildland fire rig is virtual 'no-risk experiment'

By PAUL WOLF

IN THE event of a woodland or park fire within Carmel-by-the-Sea, the city's fire crew will step into action with a piece of equipment tailored to meet the challenge.

And the city hasn't put a penny into ensuring this would be the case.

"If we can dash into a park and fight a fire, we can mitigate the situation immediately," said Carmel Fire Chief Bill Hill. "For a long time we've wanted a smaller piece of equipment that we could use for wildland fires and for the downtown, but we've never been able to budget it."

Less tall, less bulky, four feet shorter and boasting special features for wildland fire suppression, the engine should lend peace of mind to neighbors bordering Mission Trails Park — the city's largest greenbelt — and Pescadero Canyon.

And to the dollar-conscious, which includes everyone these days, the engine is a virtual no-risk experiment, according to fire department officials. "This project has been come at practically no cost," Hill said.

The CFD is renting the 1976 "class 3" engine for a token $80 a month from the State Department of Forestry and Fire Protection, and it is doing so using money out of the pockets of city employees.

In three months, however, the department will consider the engine's purchase at $5,000 (according to a preliminary estimate) — again a nominal sum, considering a new wildland rig would go for about $120,000, according to Hill.

Again, private fund raising would be solicited. Now, when most city departments have begun to reduce expenditures, this is the time neither for fancy toys nor even for desperately needed equipment.

Yet, "A deals sometimes comes along that is so good you can't pass it up," explained Asst. Fire Chief John Willett.

Old but not antiquated

The engine was old but not antiquated. Off line from state service, the unit was classified as surplus.

"It benefits the state to have these vehicles staffed and maintained instead of sitting in some orchard somewhere, as this one was," Hill explained.

After the department claimed it, the rig was dirty and in need of servicing and basic mechanical work. In all, about 200 personnel hours were donated from in-house to get the equipment up to snuff. Hill likened the unit's rehabilitation to "a family project," a testimonial to the staff's eagerness to have the equipment in its hands and working.

With the addition of the wildland engine, the department now has two large "class 1" structure fire engines, a ladder truck and one utility truck.

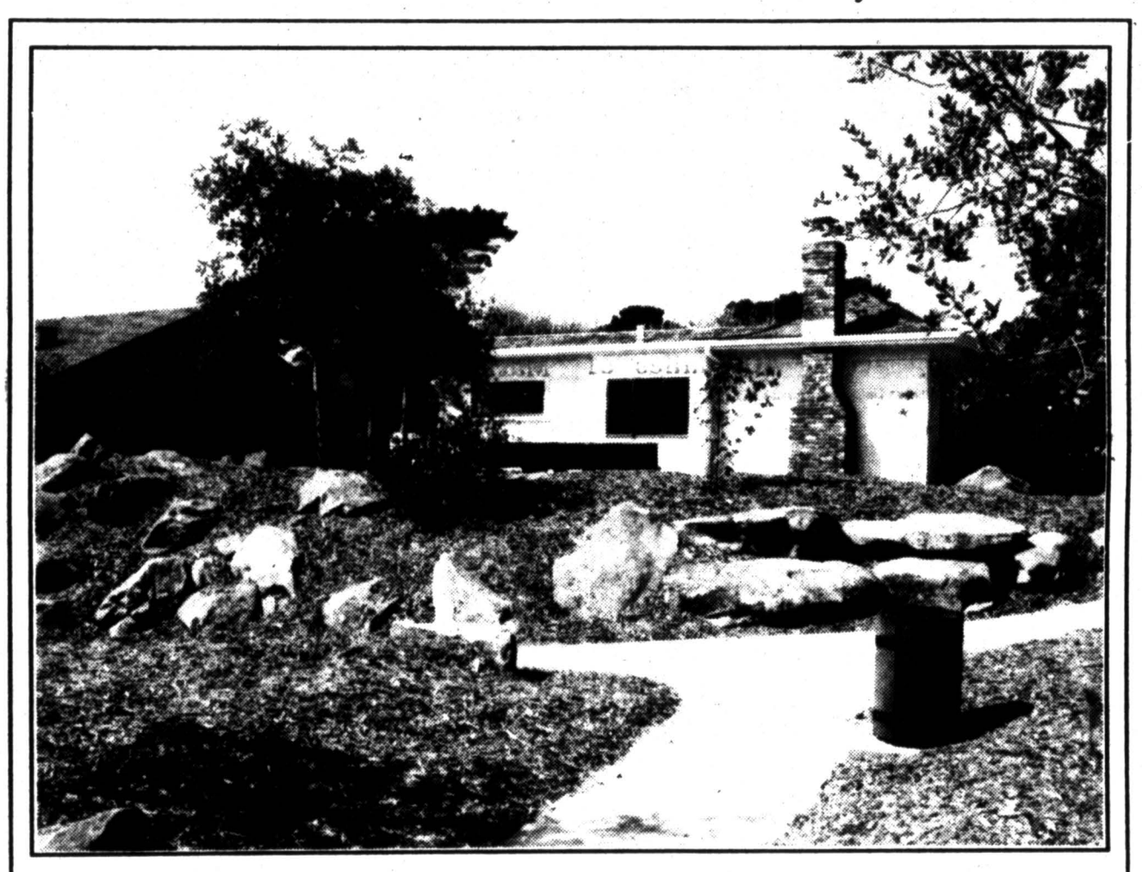
The bulky class 1 units are brought to a fire scene and stationed during the course of fire fighting. Their advantage is that up to 1,500 gallons of water per minute may be pumped from each unit.

However, "With over 15 tons of machine, they don't lend themselves to driving on dirt roads," Hill said.

Pump and roll

The wildland vehicle, on the other hand, can pump only 500 gallons per minute only, but it can do so while moving — what is known in the fire field as its "pump-and-roll capability." The rig's mobility means the fire gets put out quicker and the personnel get out faster.

Looking to the next three months, Hill said it will not take a fire within the city limits to know how valuable the equipment will prove. For starters, the staff will use the engine on training runs in wildland areas and possibly assist other departments during mutual-aid calls.



THE FIRST Murphy House will be open to the community as a casual meeting place Wednesday, Sept. 23 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Sierra Club endorses Farr and Mello

THE VENTANA Chapter of the Sierra Club has endorsed Assemblyman Sam Farr for reelection to the 28th Assembly District and Senator Henry Mello for the 15th Senatorial District.

According to the Sierra Club, both of these candidates have been leaders in promoting the Monterey Bay Sanctuary, supporting the California Coastal Commission and protecting coastal areas as well as in the acquisition and maintenance of open space. They have sought to preserve and protect old growth forests.

The Ventana Chapter does hope that both of these candidates will reevaluate their positions on the proposed Hatton Canyon freeway and provide leadership to convince CalTrans that the alternative of widening Highway 1 with appropriate overpasses would not only be a workable solution, but a solution which would avoid the destruction of wetlands and a large portion of the native Monterey Pine forest.

Tree pruning

CLIFF HATCH, Carmel's tree-climbing specialist, will keep his feet firmly planted on the ground when he demonstrates pruning techniques to residents at a tree workshop from 10 a.m. to noon Sept. 19, at Forest Hill Park, First Avenue and Camino del Monte.

With a firm injunction to owners of residential trees not to attempt his risky tasks aloft, Hatch, who works for the Carmel Forest and Beach Department, will also demonstrate how he climbs trees to help keep Carmel's urban forest healthy.

(Those who attend are urged to park at Vista Lobos Park, enter on Fourth Avenue east of Junipero and walk the short distance to Forest Hill.)

The workshop, sponsored by Carmel's Forest and Beach Commission as part of the village's "Year of the Forest," will consist of seven "stations" at which all phases of tree care and lore will be covered.

Among other, those hosting the event will include:

- Mike Branson, assistant forester.
- Denise Henry, head gardener.
- Roy Thomas, forest and beach commissioner.
- Kathy Bradshaw, PG & E tree supervisor.
- Steve Brooks and Clayton Anderson, friends of Carmel Forest.

MPWMD in wait-and-see posture regarding Paralta

By PAUL WOLF

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District is finding itself in the role of passive observer regarding the Paralta Well in Seaside, which originally was supposed to be on line in early summer.

The big question now is whether the stalled project could be set for a new six-month delay over environmental issues. It's out of the district's hands.

Much is riding on the new water supply project, whose development is scheduled to end the 20-month old moratorium on new water connections. For the moment, Seaside's elected officials will be calling the shots.

On Thursday, Sept. 17, the Seaside City Council will decide whether to follow the recommendation of its planning commission and staff, which support the city's conducting a time-consuming environmental impact report on the overdue project.

The meeting, to be conducted at the Seaside City Council Chambers, 440 Harcourt in Seaside, starts at 7 p.m. Listed as "item 10" on the agenda, those interested may need to be prepared for a wait.

"We are going to find out which way the shoe is going to fall," said MPWMD General Manager Jim Cofer.

Focused EIR

A "focused EIR" would look only at the chemicals used to treat well water, as opposed to the full spectrum of environmental issues. The chemicals in question are sodium hydroxide and hydrogen peroxide. They are used to neutralize the harmless, but pungent smell caused by the hydrogen sulfide in well water.

Walter Wong, director of the Monterey County Department of Environmental Health, has tried publicly to assure Seaside officials that the chemicals are safe and are part of standard operating procedures.

If the city council authorizes it, the EIR would probably be most likely be conducted by an independent consulting firm. It could be as late as next summer when the EIR is complete and the well's construction is ready to begin, according to Cofer.

Quite simply, Cofer explained, "The EIR would extend the moratorium," since the new water from Paralta won't be available.

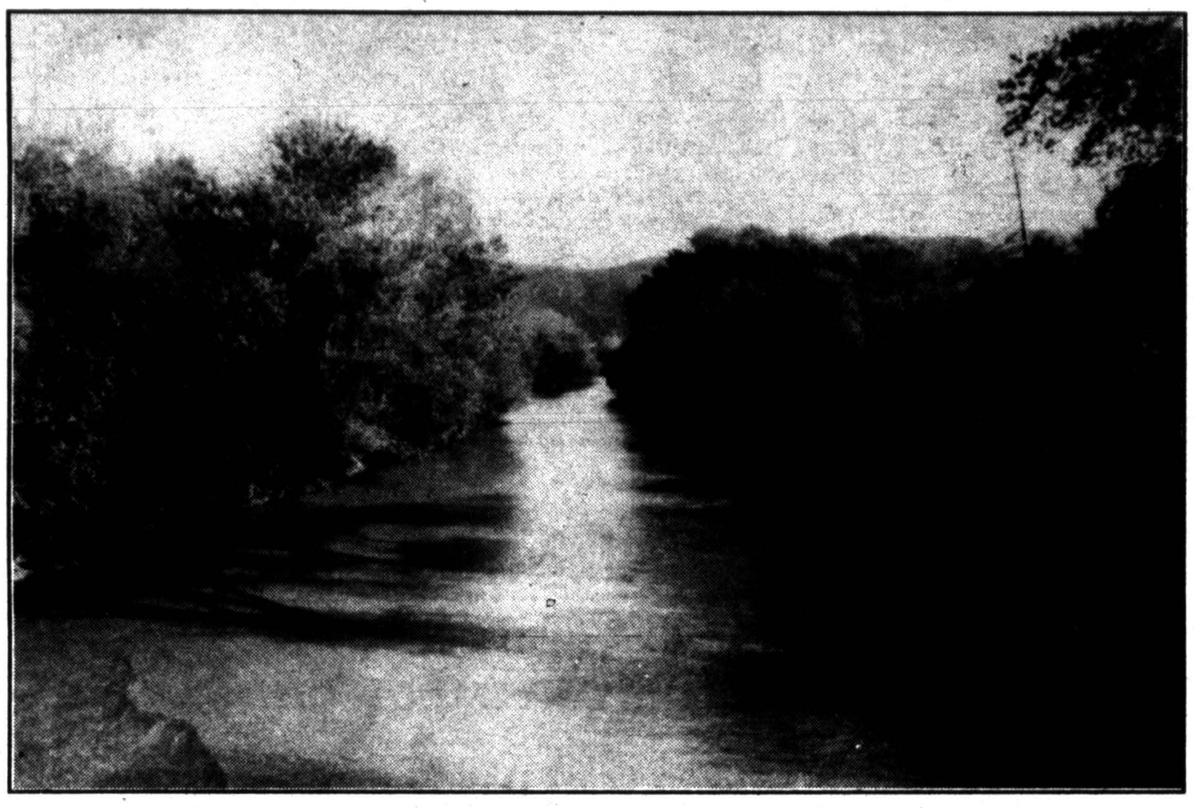
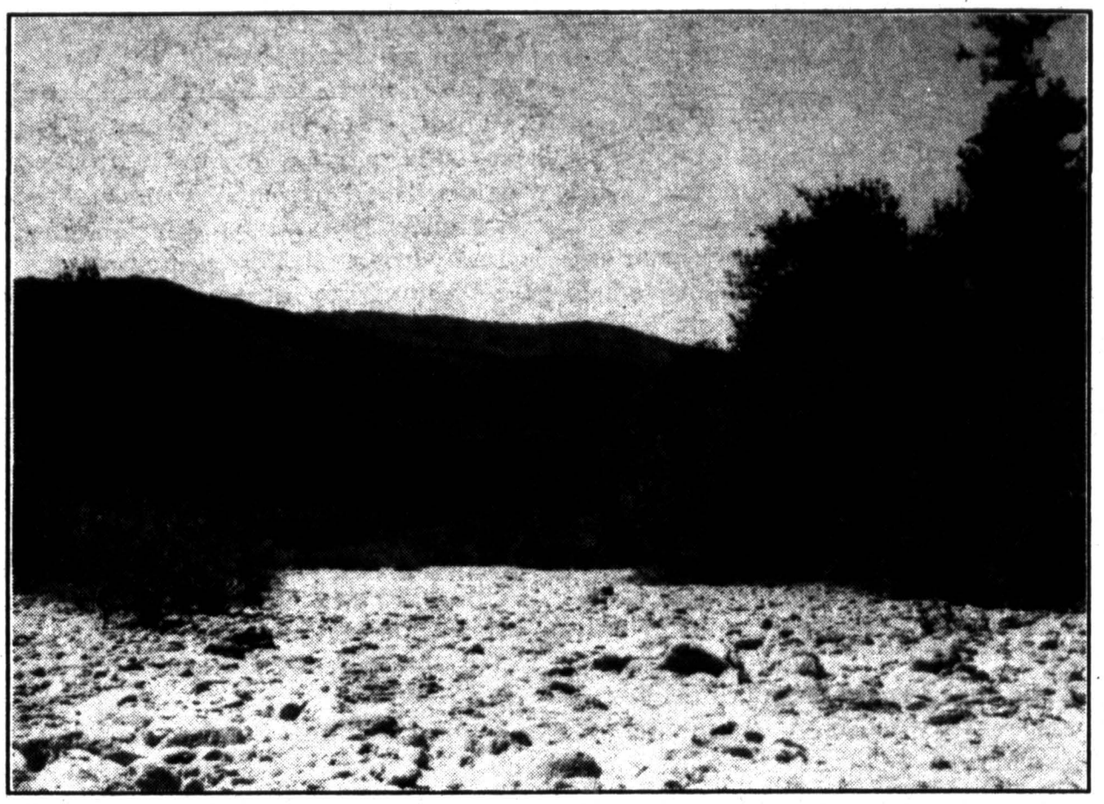
Carmel Valley Outlook



The good times...



...and the bad.

Carmel River

Carmel Valley's water resource must be protected now

By SUSAN BECK

THE WARNING is clear. Carmel Valley has to start protecting its water rights now.

"It's crucial," said Patricia Bernardi, chair of the Resident Water Committee and board member of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association. "I don't think we can handle much more."

There is so much pressure now on Carmel Valley's water resource because it is so overdrafted, said Bernardi. Her concern is that even though the new Los Padres Dam proposed by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District is expected to solve all of the peninsula's water problems, it is not expected to be built before the year 2002.

"The Carmel River is not going to make it another 10 years," said Bernardi. "We want something done now."

Representatives of the Residents Water Committee, along with the Carmel River Steelhead Association and Sierra Club attended the California State Water Resources Control Board hearings on their complaints in Sacramento in August.

The state can make several findings such as declaring how much water in Carmel Valley is available for allocation. And, among other things, they could decide to put into place a permanent moratorium until substantial water is available, mandate permanent rationing or develop a different water management plan, for example, use Seaside's Paralta Well, said Bernardi.

Her concern is that Seaside will not issue a use permit to Cal-Am for the Paralta Well which would make integrated water management on the peninsula difficult to achieve.

The water district needs about 17,000 acre feet to provide water to Cal-Am customers on the peninsula. Carmel Valley contributes about 85 percent of that water.

Seaside is holding up a use permit for Cal-Am's Paralta Well, which could potentially produce up to 2,000 acre feet even though the water district is only expecting 1,000, said Bernardi.

Out of the 1,000 acre feet, Seaside wants Cal-Am to pump 385 acre feet, which would be used for new constructions. The rest, 615 acre feet, is to be left in the ground. It was intended to be used for over commitment and drought reserve.

"Using Seaside's water would give the Carmel Valley aquifer a chance to rest," said Bernardi. "If we don't get some relief, we could end up in a water war because people might begin to wonder why they should continue to share their water to build at the expense of total devastation."

On Sept. 8 at the Water Resources Control Board hearing in Monterey, Seaside staffer Dennis Potter protested the water district's application for a new Los Padres Dam because it does not provide Seaside the 8,000 acre feet required to develop its portion of Fort Ord, said Bernardi. Fort Ord was not a consideration when the dam proposal was initiated. Potter told the water control board that Seaside was also considering preemptive water rights to its ground water.

Carmel Valley's water stays in storage and recharges the aquifer. In Seaside, from what they know, said Bernardi, the water all drains out to the ocean.

The water district can't step in to intercede because the Paralta Well is privately owned. At the same time, said Bernardi, "The water board has allowed intensification of water use even though we are in a water moratorium. The only thing that is left now is a complaint. The county can't do anything, but the state can do almost anything they want," said Bernardi.

She said that the Resident Water Committee is prepared to go to court if the state water board does not make a determination on the complaints before moving on to the application stage.

Carmel Valley

Valley's fee resolution is not well received by residents

By SUSAN BECK

CARMEL VALLEY builder Ken Wiese thinks the fee resolution recently adopted by the county to offset the cost of improving Carmel Valley Road "kills the small guy."

Cachagua Area Property Owners Association Vice President Ileene Crane-Franks thinks the fee resolution is a non-plan for getting money, which has most people confused because there is so much doubletalk, and it has been let go for so long.

Zan Henson, a Carmel Valley attorney, doesn't agree entirely with the fee resolution, but does think that safety improvements along Carmel Valley Road are better than four-laning.

And Allan Sandstrum, president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, doesn't think that any final fee resolution is going to be pleasing to everyone, in fact, it may not please anyone.

The fee resolution adopted Aug. 25 by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors is designed to satisfy the Carmel Valley Master Plan, which requires collecting fees to improve Carmel Valley Road and subsequently the traffic's level of service.

The board's decision is not, however, satisfying many of the valley's residents.

"The fees are part of the cost of doing business," said Wiese. "If you buy a lot to build a house you have to pay a fee." On the other hand he does not favor fees for existing lots of record.

"People pay taxes for years to develop, then they have to pay fees for future roads. It's not fair. This was brought on by people who want to control growth," said Wiese.

"You can't look ahead. It's so complicated. Water management changes, the county changes. I have lived on the peninsula for 40 years and a lot of the men who worked for me are going out of business," said Wiese. "I look at what I can accomplish, and feel luck to work at all."

Crane-Franks said, "It's absolutely insane. The county has tried to side step a building moratorium. Those able will continue to develop can buy their way out of this constraint."

She said that there is already a water moratorium in place within the Carmel Valley Master Plan area. In addition, because the resolution extends to people outside the targeted planning area such as Cachagua, "The people who are still able to develop their property will be paying for improvements to mid Carmel Valley Road."

The fees are slated for short-term safety improvements along Carmel Valley Road, and three pedestrian overpasses in the mid valley section are included in the package.

"The overpasses were never brought up at any forum or public hearing. There is no need for them, and they don't demonstrate the master plan," said Crane-

Franks. And, she added, there is no relation to a house being built in Cachagua and a pedestrian overpass to Carmelo School.

There are no studies as to what part of Carmel Valley Road is used by residents of Cachagua. But, said Crane-Franks, "Part of the Carmel Valley Road forums indicated that most of the Cachagua residents go over the Los Laureles Grade or out through Greenfield."

Henson doesn't think that overpasses are necessary either, nor should fees be imposed on existing lots of record, but he does think that safety improvements are essential and the only way to preserve Carmel Valley Road's rural character.

Safety improvements rather than three or four-laning Carmel Valley Road diminishes the potential for full buildout. "Essentially, I would like to see a scaling back of the over all numbers of units allowed in Carmel Valley and the plan for Carmel Valley Road," said Henson.

Even though the master plan was designed to accommodate 700 plus additional units in the valley with a possible extended four-lane stretch up to Robinson Canyon Road, Henson said that the compromise was made without knowing what the future traffic and financial feasibility would be.

"The Carmel Valley Master Plan is hardly a commitment. It's a plan, a proposal, which should be examined every five years," said Henson.

Sandstrum agrees that some type of compromise on buildout has to be looked at and that safety improvements rather then four-laning will curtail the problem.

"We are on the horns of a dilemma. The growth has reached the point were traffic is a serious problem, but a massive widening of Carmel Valley Road would cause disastrous cuts in the commercial and residential character of the valley road, which is a provincial highway," said Sandstrum.

He said that Carmel Valley Road is high on the resident's association's agenda including any further developments concerning long-range plans for obtaining the necessary money for Carmel Valley Road, and just exactly what those improvements will be.

Cachagua Country Faire

THE THIRD Annual Cachagua Country Faire will be Saturday, Sept. 26 at the Cachagua Community Center on Nason Road off of Cachagua Road in Carmel Valley.

The gates open at 9 a.m. and a pancake breakfast kicks off the festivities.

All of the proceeds from the faire will benefit the Cachagua Volunteer Fire Co., the Cachagua Community Center and the Cachagua Homeowners Association. The faire is free.

The faire will feature music, games, crafts, a live auction, food, including a chicken and tri-tip barbecue, and an evening dance.

Enjoy a day in the country with family and friends. For more information call 659-4947.

Earthbound Farm

OWNERS, MYRA Rubin and Andrew Goodman, created Earthbound Farm on Carmel Valley Road because of their concern about the environment. Everything from baby corn to arugula and salad mixes is grown organically in nearby fields.

The farm stand has been open for four weeks and business is increasing daily, said manager Kim Donlon (far left).

Also, everything that is used at the farm stand is recyclable. Earthbound is a statement that it is important to help re-create a better environment.

The return of the bohemian

JACK LONDON made an appearance at this year's "Garden Party" at La Playa Hotel. It was near dusk, as he left the bar and strolled casually down the stairs and across the lawn. His robust voice carried over the gentile gardens and caused many people to halt their conversations and listen to his tales of early Carmel.

London was known to frequent La Playa in the early 1900's and he remarked specifically to the "Garden Party" it was in November, 1906 when he was last on the premises, then the home of the Jorgensens.

London's credo that the proper function of man is to live rather than just exist sounded slightly revolutionary to the '90s audience, so accustomed to measured politeness. He was so real, so young, so full of life on this warm fall evening. Faded news clippings and equally faded memories can't capture the elusive essence of Carmel. Jack London came close.

TAELEN THOMAS

Taelen Thomas earns his living as a "biographical dramatist." He could be called a throwback, a modern-day bohemian. He's serious when he says he counts Jack London and John Steinbeck as his good friends.

"Am I a bohemian?" he mused, taking off his Jack London cap after a recent performance. "I guess so, but I don't have a cluster of bohemian friends like London did. But I do believe even though the times are different people still gather together here to laugh and share their art.

"Even though I can't meet the original Carmel bohemians in person, I still feel the excitement of their lives and work. I'm keeping their gifts and spirit alive in my performances."

Entertainer, actor, historian teller of tales and biographical dramatist; all these terms apply to Thomas, who holds degrees in philosophy from Stanford and the University of Hawaii and who also pursued a career as a middleweight boxer in the mid '60s. More recently he's traveled around the country giving performances to a wide spectrum of audiences, from corporate executives to school children.

Starting tonight he will be bringing Jack London and Carmel history to life for audiences at La Playa Hotel every Thursday evening. Two performances are scheduled, pre and post dinner at 6:30 and 8:00. For more information call Cultural Resources - 626-4681 or La Playa Hotel - 624-6476.

PEEPS

Taelen Thomas' breadth of knowledge and ability to remain true to his character was proven at a recent preview performance special guests including John Cope, owner of La Playa and several inn keepers from Carmel. As he finished his performance as Jack London, he asked the audience for questions and from the front row, someone asked, "What do you think Carmel will be like in 1992?" Thomas, in character as London, replied, "I think there might be 300, 400, no, maybe even 600 or 700 hundred people here by then. I expect there will be lots more trees and that they will have figured out a way to get rid of the mud and dust on Ocean Ave."

Living legend Brett Weston will make a rare appearance in Carmel Saturday, Sept. 19 at Photography West on Dolores St. to autograph copies of his new book, Hawaii: Fifty Photographs by Brett Weston.. For more information call Photography West at 625-1587.

Sharlotte Broudy was an artist. She died of AIDS in 1991 after producing a hauntingly naive body of work. Her first exhibition was at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art in 1979. A second exhibit, a tribute to her life's work, both as an artist and a passionate spokesperson for AIDS will be held there opening Sept. 19 and remaining on display through January 17, 1993.

IRONIES & INTRIGUES

Speaking of Ocean Ave., donations are coming in to the Carmel Business Association to pay for electricity to be installed in the median strip of Ocean Ave. The idea to light the trees in the center of town for Christmas is taking off and businesses are sending in checks to defray the cost. The city has said they have no funds available but will kindly leave the trenches open so the wiring can be done. Imagine all those trees covered with Christmas lights. It's going to be a heck of a tree-trimming party.

Speaking of the La Playa, has anyone noticed the fig leaf on the Greek statue in the Poseiden room? It's just a guess, but did the few ladies in Rotary ask for a small concession from their male counterparts? By the way, Rotary is holding a membership drive.

BATS ABOUT YOU BABY

It's the middle of the night. She wakes up. She's a light sleeper and just knows something flew across the bed.

"Did you feel that?"

"Huh?" he grunts.

"There's something in here, I know it," she says, trying to see through the darkness.

"Where?"

"There, by the window, no, now it's here in the corner."

"Do you want me to turn on the light?" he growls.

"Okay," she says, hoping she's right, but dreading what she'll see.

"Now the light's on, do you see anything?"

"Oh my God, it's a bat," she yelps, and dives under the covers.

For the next hour, after removing a screen from the bedroom window to use as a weapon, he lunges around the bedroom trying to shoo the bat out the open window, bathrobe flapping around his legs.

She has slithered out of the bed and is barricaded in the bathroom, and meekly asks every few minutes if he's gotten rid of the vile creature yet. The ending is not pretty, but he prevails and they return to bed. She sleeps the rest of the night with one eye open.

This couple are perfect candidates for an evening at Rancho San Carlos in Carmel Valley "Exploring the World of Bats" with Dr. Dixie Pierson, a leading authority on our only flying mammals. Dr. Pierson is eager to share her enthusiasm and knowledge about bats. She has identified and studied 10 species of bats on Rancho San Carlos and through a slide presentation, evening walk and hands on demonstration will correct the misunderstandings we all have about these furry nocturnal mammals.

It's merely a coincidence this event comes so close to Halloween.

For information call the Rancho San Carlos Foundation at 626-8200. Reservations are limited and are required by Sept. 21.

WALK FOR KIDS

Walk for Pride, Saturday, Sept. 19, is the major fall fundraiser sponsored by P.G. Pride in support of Pacific Grove Schools. Last fall the lack of state support for education prompted parents and relatives to come out and walk the short distance from Lovers Point to the Aquarium and back, armed with pledges totaling over $3,500. Pledges that were designated by parents to fund specifics such as their child's class, science lab, music programs, a specific field trip or special interest.

These pledges do not go to Sacramento, do not pay salaries and don't even go through the P.G. school district unless the donor wishes to designate a gift. Pledges are tax deductible and the walking path is lovely these fall days. For more information on pledges, entry fees and starting times, please call Linda Jones at 646-6540.

Padre Sports Review

By James Genone

Football wrap-up

Varsity

THE PADRES scored an emotional victory in last Saturday's home opener when they ran over Harbor High SChool 30-7. Second-string quarterback Robbie Shaffer, starting for the still injured John Geisler, was 10 of 17 for 121 yards with one interception, as he lead the Padres to victory.

"Shaffer stepped in and did a real fine job," said head coach Craig Johnston.

Jeff Saunders also turned in a big game, rushing for 64 yards on 10 carries and scoring three touchdowns. Carmers other touchdown came on a pitch-option pass from Brian Purdy to Sean Boehlje. Kicker Jono Spaulding was good on three of four PAT attempts, with one miss on a bad snap. A 28-yard field goal completed the scoring.

The big story of the game was turnovers. Harbor quarterback Matt Watson was picked off three times, with Larry Brooks, Dan Silver, and Anthony Herro each grabbing an interception. Jeff Saunders also recovered a fumble for the Padres. Harbor special teams miscues also helped Carmel. On two occasions bad snaps allowed the Carmel offense to start a drive near the Harbor end zone.

Johnston was very pleased with the performance.

"I thought we played pretty hard," said Johnston. Johnston also responded to the issue of stars on the team. "We don't have any real big stars on the team. Everyone contributes, and if they all do their jobs, we'll be fine," he commented.

This was very apparent in the Harbor game as many players turned in great performances. Evi Plata and Larry Brooks were exceptional on defense, as was senior Marc Garza. The offensive line was also superb, not giving up a sack, nor allowing the Harbor defense to harass Shaffer.

"Our goal for the season is to not give up a sack," said senior lineman Lance Thompson. "We call it the no-sack pact."

Overall this was a great game for the Padres. It established momentum heading into this weekend's tough matchup with Santa Cruz, and allowed the Padres to get over some beginning of the season jitters that often cause mental mistakes.

THE PADRES, led by Senior Lineman Lance Thompson (number 77) take the field for their first game of the season.

Frosh-Soph

Brent Carlson rushed for 150 yards, and gained another 50 receiving, as the junior varsity beat Harbor 22-12. Carlson, a sophomore, ran all over Harbor defenders as he dominated both halves with his bruising running style.

Freshman quarterback Ryan Sanchez also turned in an outstanding performance, throwing touchdown passes of 20, 30, and 40 yards. John Martine, Brett Eyerman, and Brent Carlson hooked up with Sanchez for the scores. Carlson and sophomore Juan Cortina were also on the receiving end of passes from Sanchez that resulted in two point conversions.

Coach Ables cited great defensive play on the part of Greg Mayer, Bart Rowley, Paul Lewellen, and John Porteous.

This Saturday the Padres travel to Santa Cruz where they will play a strong Cardinal team that last week decimated RLS 30-14.

"Santa Cruz has probably the fastest running-backs we'll face all year," said Johnston.

The frosh-soph game will start at 11:30 a.m.; varsity will begin at 2:00 p.m.

Fall sports preview

Waterpolo

The Padre Waterpolo team looks to continue a winning tradition, and they started down that road last Saturday by winning a 12 team tournament at Contra Costa College in San Pablo. Carmel is led this year by seniors Robert Allaire and Nate Stiles. Sophomores Kyle Nichols and Steve Bonefant will also contribute to the team's success. Ed Sigourney is team coach.

Girls Volleyball

This year's Padre volleyball team showed a lot of toughness in their first match of the season against a powerful San Lorenzo Valley. The lady-Padres, under the tutelage of new athletic director Lisa Fraser, won two out of three games in the j.v. match, but lost the varsity match three games to two.

"We came out strong and showed a lot of our strengths and weaknesses," said Fraser.

Both varsity and j.v. lost in matches against Monterey, but should be much improved by the time league competition begins.

Cross-country

Returning MTAL champion Danielle Wall leads the historically fleet Padre runners into action this year. Wall, who was the fastest in the league last year, is one of only six to run for Carmel this year. Joining her is junior Jason Kistenmacher, the only other returning runner, who looks to be much improved this season. The cross-country team is coached by Joe Mendelson.

Girls Tennis

The Carmel girls tennis team beat up on Harbor High school last Friday, winning the match 5-1. Juniors Navarre Bautista, Lisa Battaglia, and Jenny Eyerman led the way as Carmel's 22-member team opened their season. Coach Dave Chaney is excited about the team's chances.

"I think we'll do pretty well," said Chaney.

Their main competition will be RLS, but the Padres will stand a better chance when top player Aimee Reeder returns after missing the Harbor match.

Binoculars for near-sighted economists, the final phase

THE CHART of the Federal Reserve has a very, very strong Neptune. Neptune remember has no boundaries and so the Fed has the power not only to create money but to control it. It forced credit into the system just before the 1929 crash, and most of that "new" money went into the stock market due to the enormous return rate. Everyone borrowed then especially to speculate because they got back more than they invested and it didn't take long. This is what is called profit margin. Money went into paper assets like stocks and bonds. Why did the Fed create credit? So that money could be "put back" into the economy because it was failing then too. Americans have become a nation of gamblers in $2,000 suits. Las Vegas and Atlantic City are no different, except they wear hats to go with the suits. Then, as now, other countries took money "out" of our US banks because they saw the fall coming.

Right now, in the Federal Reserve chart there are three planets progressed in Pisces; the Sun, Mercury, Venus and the North Node (all centered in its 9th house which shows "where" the money is coming from, as in mostly foreign countries). And since it's Neptune-Pisces again, there is much more mystery (Neptune) connected with that. Did you know that the Federal Reserve has no accurate estimate of the amount of U.S. currency in circulation outside the country? Are you aware that, according to economist John Williams, Iran and Syria are more adept at creating money than the Federal Reserve? Did you know that Iran is using government presses to print very nearly perfect counterfeit US $100 bills... give or take a billion here and there? Neptune also rules "fake money." You'll see it showing up in cash-hungry places like the former Soviet Union, parts of Europe, Asia and yes, Africa.

$100 bills are the favorite for drug deals, bribes and not to forget laundering money. It's an interesting system: Iran produces and Syria distributes through anything from drug trade to connections to terrorists. How much do you want to bet the US Treasury starts recalling the "old" bills?

As for the IRS... more Neptune I am afraid. Its Sun and Mercury in Cancer squares its Neptune in Aries as it was enacted July 1, 1862. It started with three clerks in a single office in the Treasury building and by January, 1863 had a force of 4,030. Where did they all come from? That's Neptune mystery for you! Since the IRS 10th house of career is 8-degrees Cancer and T. Mars will be hitting its bubbles left and right, watch what happens Sept. 25-30 (1992). Mars will retrograde and come back all of February, 1993 and go direct on Feb.15, 1993, finally stopping on March 1, 1993.

The IRS makes lots and lots of mistakes (Neptune) and they have plenty of opportunity with its Sun and Mercury square Neptune. Did you know that last year they sent four million notices to taxpayers for $5 billion in "extra" taxes and penalties due to their 1990 returns claiming discrepancies between what you reported and what your employer, bank, broker, and mortgage company reported about you? Those of you who challenge Neptune's methods (the penalties and charges) have a 40-50 percent chance of beating them. Nice thought, isn't it?

Are you aware that 62 cents of every dollar of personal income tax paid this year will go to pay interest on the national debt? We've over-relied on debt to finance government spending and that has to lead to financial and economic disaster. Americans... when are you going to wake up? The second quarter Corporate Review (source: Aug. 3 edition of the Wall Street Journal) shows drug retailing leading this country. What does that tell you? Drugs are ruled by Neptune and Pisces... and that apathy and passivity are blossoming. Do we prefer to be anesthestized into thinking there is no limit (Neptune) to the government's credit? Do you prefer deficits and federal benefits to higher taxes or reduced benefits? Don't worry... Congress will give you what you want.

We are now at the end of the plateau and the beginning of the second phase of the long wave cycle or "economic contraction" which by is by now obvious and headed for severe times. This phase will end when we have totally exhausted the ability to carry anymore debt. Then Wall Street will do its "swan dive" from the excesses... we are at that doorway.

This is the end of the four-part series on the Kondratieff Wave. Next week: Being able to survive in a new economy. Got a question, comment? Want a consultation? Call me at (408) 624-2881 or write: P.O. Box 223825, Carmel California, 93922.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By Doris Day

We get letters...

Q. MY FAMILY adopted a dog from the animal shelter and I think she was abused. Millie growls when we try to pet her and my dad wants to return her. Do you think she'll change after awhile?

A. Not without lots of help! You need a great trainer to guide you and help you establish trust between you and your adopted doggy. Without professional help, Millie won't know where she stands or what's expected of her. Just like a child, she needs to know her boundaries. A few weeks ago I talked about Susan O'Brien of Kindred Spirits Obedience Training (649-5719). She is excellent and I know she'd be able to help you and Millie become Best Friends.

Q. Joseph, my chocolate lab, is about 10 percent overweight. He's been on a diet for a week but it doesn't seem to be working. What else can I do?

A. The very first thing you should do is get Joseph to his veterinarian for a thorough check-up. A routine physical exam is critical to your pet's health and well-being, particularly because he can't tell you how he feels.

Your veterinarian may suggest a prescription reducing diet to help Joseph shed those extra pounds. That means cutting down on between-meal treats too, so it's up to you to see that he follows his diet.

I'm a firm believer in exercise, for two-leggers and four-leggers. How much and how often depends on age and physical health. A nice walk once or twice a day, with your doggy on a leash, would be beneficial to both of you.

Please don't delay – take Joseph to his veterinarian right away and get him started on the road to a healthy new lifestyle.

Poison control

If you have aproblem with mice or rats, be extremely careful when using poisons. Put them between walls, along crawl spaces or in the attic – places accessible to rodents but harder for pets and children to get into.

If you should see your pet eating rodent bait or if you suspect poisoning, call your veterinarian immediately. As I've mentioned in the previous column, help is also available through the National Animal Poison Control Center: 1-800-548-2423. A veterinary toxicologist staffs the phone and the center is open 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. There is a $25 charge if it is determined that veterinary help is necessary. You will be given immediate first-aid instructions and recommendations for short-term treatment.

That's all for this week. See younext time!

A couple of pears Part I

SEPTEMBER IS the beginning of the main season for pears, although the first pears appear in mid-July and finish in January.

The pear tree is a native of Asia Minor and is thought to have grown wild in prehistoric times. They were grown by the Greeks and Romans and introduced to the lands they conquered. The Romans ate them, dried, cooked and raw of course, but they also made an alcoholic drink with the fruit. During the Middle Ages in Europe they were only found in the gardens of castles and monasteries. Even in the 17th and 18th centuries the growing of pears was considered a wealthy gentleman's hobby.

The first pear tree in Massachusetts Bay Colony was planted in 1630. It stood for over 250 years and grew about 80 feet. Most of the pear trees in the Eastern United States were destroyed by fire blight disease, so the cultivation in the United States is practically limited to California, Oregon and Washington.

Thousands of varieties

There are thousands of registered varieties in the United States, but not one is native to North America.

Our important pear stock has been imported directly from Europe. Our varieties are either direct descendants of European varieties or hybrids produced by crossing European stock with Chinese (also known as sand pears).

The most popular variety in America is the yellow Bartlett, also known called Williams pear in England and France and was brought to the U.S. around 1797-99 and was called the Williams pear until around 1848. Size range is medium to large and has an oblong, obtuse, bell-like shape. The skin is fairly thin, bright yellow and occasionally has a red blush when ripe. The flesh is white, fine, free of grit, juicy, sweet and very smooth.

Then there is the Anjou, d'Anjou or Beurre d'Anjou. Sales make up about 3/4 of the winter total. Originated in Belgium in 1819 and introduced to the U.S. in the 1840's. They store well and are medium to large and shaped similar to the Bartlett, but have a shorter neck, are oval or globular with slightly unequal sides. The skin color is yellowish-green; occasionally sprinkled with russet (sometimes shaded to dull crimson). The flesh is yellowish-white, fairly fine;which is buttery and juicy.

The Comice also called Doyenne du Comice (which means best in the show) reached American about 1850. It is a larger, more deluxe version of the Bartlett and is usually the type found in expensive gift packs.

The Bosc also known as Beurre Bosc, has been a long time favorite on the East Coast, but is still relatively new to the West. It rates best in dessert quality when grown properly. It is very easy to recognize because of its long tapering neck and cinnamon color and when ripe is still firm and crisp.

The Seckel pear originated in the United States because it is blight resistant. It is very small in size and usually symmetrical in shape, has a brownish-yellow skin often blushed red. It is very juicy, noted for sweet aromatic, and spicy flavor. Characteristically grainy since it's a hybrid of a European and Chinese or sand pear.

How to pick pears...

Pears are one of the few fruits where "tree-ripened" is not a good selling point. They must be picked when mature but while they are still hard since they don't ripen successfully on the tree.

They usually must be ripened at home (usually 2-3 days). The best place to ripen is on top of the refrigerator where the temperature is warm and even. If kept in a plastic bag, poke holes to keep the air circulating and I've heard tell if you put an apple with the fruit you in a paper bag the ripening process is speeded up. The pear is ready when there's a little give on the sides or stem and when pressed gently. Put ripe pears in the refrigerator and when picking out fruit to avoid ones with the skins that have cuts, bruises, dark spots or decay.

When I start researching a subject I get carried away with all the info, so the next column will be devoted to just pear recipes.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

Few complaints valid

A CARTOON in the New Yorker shows Noah standing in the bow of the ark with all the animals facing him and says, "Now hear this. For the sake of morale when afloat, I am requesting that you refrain from unnecessary bleating, braying, squeaking, screeching, moaning, neighing, grunting, growling, barking, howling, chirping, hooting, clucking, hissing, and quacking."

Oh Lord, may we Carmelites, both the ruling nobles and the serfs, refrain from all unnecessary bleating, bragging, complaining and all the other verbal noise that can disturb the tranquility and peace of the lives of those around us.

Finally, may we realize that most of the time our complaints are as valid as the howl of a coyote baying at the moon.

We are like the Ozark mountain hillbilly sitting on the picket fence yelling. When asked why, he replies, I'm sittin' on a nail and I'm too lazy to git off."

Type O Donors needed now

The Community Hospital Blood Center no longer can draw blood at the Defense Language Institute, a major source in earlier years, and in addition, because of a last-minute cancellation of a Bloodmobile, the blood supplies are now seriously low, especially for type O blood. The Blood Center hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday. Also on Thursday from 10:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. For more information call 625-4814.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Three younger generations gathered in a New York suburb to celebrate Lillian Postman's 108th birthday. "I've had a lot of highs and lows," she recalled. The highs: her wedding day and six years that followed, until her husband died at 29. Raising her family and becoming a nurse "took a lot of blood, sweat and tears," she recalled. How did she make it to 108? "Living every day as though it were my last, and doing what I had to do. Everybody is put here for a certain reason. You have a place in life and you have to find it." The last 100 years have been filled with new things like electricity and penicillin, she noted. Her first eight years were uneventful, a grandson quipped.

Jazz stars give items to build new fest collection

By JOHN DETRO

IT'S FITTING that the 35th annual Monterey Jazz Festival focuses partially and healthfully on nostalgia.

This weekend at the fairgrounds will be the final MJF edition with founder Jimmy Lyons in an executive role. When Jimmy retires at the end of Sunday night's arena jam session, Tim Jackson from Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz will take the reins fully rather than fill a co-producer's role as he did for 1992.

Giants who played the first MJF will work Jimmy's last show — Dave Brubeck, Modern Jazz Quartet, Gerry Mulligan, John Birks (Dizzy) Gillespie.

Additionally, a special photography exhibit (curated and brought to MJF by jazz lenseman Lee Tanner) covers the career of the one and only Diz.

Birks now celebrates his 75th birth anniversary. He has been a witty, inventive presence at Monterey throughout the local fest's history. Post-surgical recovery led his doctor to allow the peninsula jaunt from the Gillespie home in New Jersey.

And as if all that weren't enough, the fest-sponsoring MCI Communications now announces that it has assembled the event's initial memorabilia collection "with items donated by many of the jazz world's most distinguised artists."

The collection will be displayed at the Hyatt Regency Monterey Hotel beginning Friday, Sept. 18, and continuing through Sunday, Sept. 20. MCI executive Jonathan Crane plans a formal ceremony at which Tim and Jimmy will receive the treasure trove.

Arts & Leisure

Crane: "Prominent past and present (MJF) performers have contributed and autographed items for the collection — Branford Marsalis, Dave Brubeck, Wynton Marsalis, Buddy Guy, Joe Williams, Chick Corea, Dianne Schuur, Gerry Mulligan, The Yellowjackets, Stanley Turrentine, Arturo Sandoval, Etta James, Spyro Gyra, John Lee Hooker, so many others."

And: "Donations include original sheet music, first-run albums, posters, advance release CDs, collector's edition songbooks and other articles of sentimental value to the jazz buff. We'd like to thank the contributors. It's this spirit of camaraderie and giving that makes the jazz world so extraordinary."

Official recognition

Monterey Mayor Dan Albert got in on the fun, proclaiming Sept. 18-20 Jimmy Lyons Days all over the city.

Lyons-based proclamations and letters of commendation came as well from President Bush, Congressman Leon Panetta, U.S. Senators Cranston and Seymour, Gov. Pete Wilson, State Sen. Henry Mello, Assemblyman Sam Farr, Monterey County Board of Supervisors and several Monterey County mayors.

An invitational luncheon honoring Jimmy was scheduled Friday afternoon at Spanish Bay. Proceeds will enter a jazz scholarship fund bearing his name. Event organizer: Sue Dewar.

Lyons will retain functional ties to the fest he created. Invited into the role by MJF board president Myron Etienne Jr., Jimmy has agreed to lead the annual Japan tour taken by the statewide High School All-Star Big Band.

Freed from oppression, they paint with joy

By SCOTT BREARTON

THE HERMITAGE Group of St. Petersburg, an informal group of eight Russian painters, visited downtown Carmel the other day. The men proceeded to set up their easels on the sidewalk and paint the Felice Building near the corner of Seventh and Dolores.

VOLODIA OBATNIN

Working together since 1960, the group is enjoying their first visit to America.

Under totalitarianism, their work often contained images of longing and suppressed hope. Now, according to sponsor Tony Wolf, their work is brighter, their palettes different, their tones lighter.

According to painter Volodia Obatnin, although they have much more freedom than before, other factors inhibit their artistic expression in Russia today.

"Paints cost too much and supplies are hard to get," Obatnin said.

"We hope to return if possible, but there are difficulties with (airline) tickets and money – the Russian bureaucracy."

Obatnin says the one major difference between the pre-breakup Russia and today is that "Now we have the possibility to exhibit our paintings." He explained that the government had restricted the showing of their work for ideological reasons. The Hermitage group are social realists, their work expressing the pain of an oppressed people.

Boris Golovachov echoed his friend's sentiments: "Totalitarianism can suppress the activity of the spirit. Now that we are free, we are connected with more constant things, maybe with eternity."

On their newfound freedom, Obatnin said: "It's a magic feeling."

Bert's retrospective set

By JOHN DETRO

THE OFFICIAL announcement came this week. Carmel Art Association will mount a 25-year retrospective of sculptures by Bert Conaghan from Oct. 8-Nov. 3.

He passed away earlier this month. The exhibit's two-hour reception will start at 6 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 10, at the CAA Gallery (Dolores between Fifth and Sixth).

Born at Cleveland in 1920, Conaghan was graduated cum laude from UC/Santa Barbara in 1953 with a major in fine art. He came to this peninsula in 1963 and trained with Alex Weygers in sculpture, metalwork and blacksmithing.

He was a full-time sculptor since 1970, working in a variety of media with the emphasis on carving stone. He was past president of CAA.

Casanave photos

Monterey Bay Coffeehouse Bookshop (downtown Monterey) offers gallery shows each month. September's treasure trove —black-and-white photographic portraits by Martha Casanave.

Casanave chose to hang at-home portraits of local friends and acquaintances including photographers Ruth Mayerson Gilbert, Brett Weston and the late Answel Adams plus painters Eve Tartar, Karen Nagano, the late Edith Truesdell, others.

Martha has been a working portraitist on the Monterey Peninsula for two decades and, during that time, has won a national reputation. Photographic work and teaching take her to the former Soviet Union annually; she has completed several projects there.

These themes, in addition to her portrait and figure work, are featured in her book Past Lives— published by Godine of Boston last year. Signed copies of this volume are available at the shop.

Big day

Don't forget the Third Annual Monterey Bay Artists' Day on Saturday, Sept. 26, at Monterey Peninsula College Creative Arts Complex. The formal discussions will center on breaking through and overcoming obstacles.

The featured speaker will be Oakland-based painter Squeak Carnwath. Her recent work is on display at Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art through Jan. 17 of next year.

Panelists: Coeleen Kiebert (sculptor), Joel Leivick (photographer and educator), Sam Hernandez (sculptor). Contact Monterey County Cultural Council in Salinas for fee and signup information (424-3034).

Bargains, bargains

Note from Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art: "Special treasures will be available at the Better Than Usual Sale from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 19, at San Carlos Parish Hall. Sponsored by MPMA, this is an outstanding chance to pick up quality collectibles — reasonably priced art works and frames, art books, clothing, linens, kitchenware and craft items."

In addition, Museum members have placed "numerous items" on consignment. Information: 624-2463, 372-2334 or 372-5477.

Meanwhile, selected watercolors, pastels, oils and drawings by Anders Aldrin (1889-1970) are on display in MPMA's Gallery IV through Jan. 24, 1993.

PHOTOGRAPHER BRETT Weston will be making a rare public appearance to sign copies of his latest book from 5-7 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 19, at Carmel's Photography West Gallery (Dolores at Ocean). The volume's called Hawaii: Fifty Photographs by Brett Weston and this sample from it surely shows the man's careful, much-appreciated touch.

"Aldrin's works are observations about the West," MPMA program notes observe, "coming from a Swede to whom the force of the warm and unfamiliar California landscape must have been astounding. It is therefore of great interest that many of these works — particularly the prints — are tempered with a technique of the East. (This is) the limning of blocks of color and form with black outlines, a technique perhaps most recognized in the Ukiyo-e woodblock print tradition of Japan."

Benefit kicks off new Monterey County Symphony season

MONTEREY COUNTY Symphony (MCS) will kick off its 47th season on Sunday, Sept. 20, with a benefit at Quail Lodge Golf Clubhouse.

The occasion called A Musical Soiree will feature international pianist Jean Louis Steuerman, violinist (and MCS concertmaster) Phillip Levy and MCS music director Clark Suttle (contrabass virtuoso).

Festivities will begin at 5:30 p.m. with cocktails followed by the recital and then cocktails/hors d'oeuvres served at table. Tickets cost $60 per person or $500 per table of 10; call 624-8511 for more details.

The recital program will include music by Mozart, Schubert, De Falla and Bach. One highlight will be Suttle's original arrangement of Andean folk melodies for violin, piano and contrabass.

"The performers have donated their services to benefit Monterey County Symphony," says Special Events Chairperson Susan Britton. "This is a fabulous opportunity for all of us in the county to enjoy the impressive musical talents of our conductor and concertmaster. And to have Jean Louis Steuerman performing in the intimate setting is very special."

Brazil-born Steuerman records exclusively for Philips and recently completed the entire works for piano and orchestra by George Gershwin. His first recording with Philips, Bach's Six Partitas, won le Diapaison d'Or.

Remembering Jim

He was an extremely popular performer in this area's musical theater. Now a recital remembering the recently-deceased Jim Sutty has been announced for Carmel's St. Philip Lutheran Church on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 27.

Soprano Phyllis Jean McChesney says all proceeds will go to Monterey County AIDS Project. She will be joined in the 3 p.m. program by Amy Washburn (mezzo soprano), Carl Palme (baritone) and accompanist David Auerbach.

Composers represented include Handel, Mozart, Fuare, Offenbach, Copland, Sondheim. The vocal artists and Auerbach all are richly-experienced and praised members of the regional music scene.

Homecoming

The man has traveled far in pursuit of his Muse. But now bass-baritone Marcus Silvanus Nance is returning to Pacific Grove for an 8 p.m. recital on Saturday, Sept. 19, at the First Baptis Church.

A product of PG schools and Youth Music Monterey, Nance will present a program of Mozart, Brahms, American spirituals and show tunes. At the piano — Franklin Brasz. (Donations will be accepted; call 899-5526 if you wish more details.)

Nance is a two-time winner of the Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions. He has performed with the Glimmerglass Opera, Illinois Opera Theater, Natchez Opera Festival, Shreveport Opera, many other companies.

He soon will be competing as a finalist in the International McAllister Awards Opera Competition. Nance lives in Urbana, Illinois, where he studies with Mignon Dunn of the Metropolitan Opera.

Brasz is on staff with Illinois Opera Theater and also freelances throughout the Midwest and Canada.

New season

Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula will be celebrating its 25th anniversary during the 1992-93 season, notes spokesperson Ben Heller.

This organization, of course, sponsors the annual Carmel National Chamber Music Competition. Heller made the point while announcing the new season of five concerts, the competition and a concert by the four winning ensembles.

Society memberships still are open ($45 apiece) and cover admission to all the events. Concerts are held at Sunset Center Theater with a limited number of tickets available at the door ($14 adults and $5 for those under 21).

• Tokyo String Quartet will open the season with an Oct. 6 concert. This has been hailed as one of the finest such units in chamber music history.

• An Die Music is a unique 17-year-old quintet of oboe, string trio and piano. Performance date: Nov. 19.

• Fresk Quartet will offer a concert on Jan. 29, 1993. This, Scandinavia's premiere quartet, has been performing for more than two decades.

• Los Angeles Piano Quartet will ap-

Review: Witches romp, Macbeths fall

By JOHN DOTSON

"FAIR IS foul, and foul is fair. / Hover through the fog and filthy air."

Pillars of smoke lifted sparks and ashes over the firepits on either side of the Forest Theater stage as day faded and the moon hung between tall pine branches. The environs were so disposed for opening night of the Carmel Shake-speare Festival presentation of Macbeth. Cawing crows, barking dogs, and even the crickets merged with the effects performed by tympanist Conlan Keator in an eerie overture. A timely bat flapped over the large audience assembled for this "Medieval Horror Story," as GroveMont Theater bills its production.

My vantage point midway up the racked seating allowed me to take in the panoramic — at times kaleidoscopic — expanse of this spectacle of evil. Director Nina Capriola's use of space, the lattice-work set of Robert Cook, and John Rousseau's audio concepts cast a synaesthetic spell. As with Othello, which this troupe performs in repertory, I was drawn to consider what new information the ever-modern Shakespeare (whoever that person was) might offer our own times.

From the first troopings and trappings of power, I searched for the sinister, the ugly, the chill at the marrow from murder to murder to murder. I expected the confrontation with tangible (that is, felt) evil, evil incarnate, intimate and cosmic. Though blood is mentioned in the script more than a hundred times, I recall no stage blood at all and the deeper sense of revulsion never came. Rather than realism, the action seemed like that of an unsettling dream. The stains were abstract and theoretical and in the end, I think, the more insidious for it.

With sophisticated special effects, the production glittered with a thoroughly contemporary confusion of reality and unreality that for me disclosed a distinctly post-modern imperviousness to evil when "...nothing is /But what is not." As the machinery whirred and hummed and dazzled with its pyrotechnics, I got a horrifying new sense of the Shakespearian comprehension of moral bewilderment, political deceit and natural disruption as one and the same violation, and at its core, the lust for power. And the greater the power any individual or nation holds, the greater its potential to violate.

It is difficult to imagine a power in history — political or cultural or technological — that has exceeded that of our own nation in this century. The reminder of Macbeth is that while the power of evil cannot eliminate the function of conscious choice, expanding power increasingly predisposes its possessors to corruption.

Many vectors

Only 18 years separated the premier of Macbeth (1606) from the defeat of the Spanish Armada (1588) when (with the aid of a great storm) the smaller English fleet had opened the world to England's imperial aspirations. Hamlet premiered in the same year (1601) the first English spice fleet sailed for India. In the year of Othello (1604) the ascendant James, disturbed that existing translations questioned his divine right as king, commissioned his version of scripture, and soon (1607) Jamestown was founded in colonial Virginia.

The sense of these swelling forces is evoked, I feel, in the opening scene when the newly consolidated national powers of Scotland have been put to the test in overwhelming the Norwegian invader, the outer other. This victory earns Macbeth his glory. Something of the same intoxicating power seems present in those who vaunt a unilateral U.S. triumph in the Cold War.

But as Dr. Jung observed, what we fail to make conscious we are destined to live out as fate. At the apex of his heroics, Macbeth and his lady invite elemental evil to feed their own unconfessed inner disorders.

Though her traditional family values seem intact,

Witches romp and Macbeths lose

WITCHES from page 32

Jeanne Wooster's Lady Macbeth methodically promotes the symbiosis of sex and violence — regicide and homicide becoming suicide — in her own diabolical marriage. Expelling any remnant of compassion, she invokes with a coarse and feral voice: "Come, you spirits / That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me here, / And fill me, from the crown to the toe, top-full / Of direst cruelty!" Her husband's hesitancy to rise to her own level of ambition brings this expression of her essential nature as a woman: "I have given suck, and know / How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me. / I would, while it was smiling in my face, / Have plucked my nipple from his boneless gums / And dashed the brains out, had I so sworn as you / Have done to this."

Inflated masculinity

John Rousseau's showing of Macbeth — a dense and doltish man of action who would maintain power by any means — proficiently suggests an inflated, rigid masculinity that is inwardly impotent and infantile. In royal office, such shadowy debris and contagion become mayhem in the first degree. Macbeth's wife-pleasing "strutting" and his "baby of a girl" fretting comes through as pathetic and inane, were it not so dis-memberingly insane.

Bringing promise of relief, Macduff enters, "...noble, wise, judicious" in the stalwart delivery of Lewis Sims, with convincing evidence that he "best knows / The fits o' the season." His fate becomes truly tragic because of his lack of prescience about his own vulnerability and the particular prowess required to face despotic treachery.

Julie Hughett as Lady Macduff and Arik Clark as young Macduff aptly draw the images of innocent loss — the real loss of real victims of hit teams and state-sponsored terrorism such as that of King Macbeth. The Macduffs are a necessary reminder that hope and striving toward wholeness are alternative and genuine forms of human power.

As Banquo, J. Anthony Lambert achieves his best moments for me as apparition, the dead one who will not remain in his grave but steals the festivity from the Macbeth's feast and as the mocking progenitor in Macbeth's final vision.

Largely asleep

Ellis Allbee turns in a commendable King Duncan, the kindly, conservative leader, who reigns benignly while largely asleep as witnessed in the devastatingly ironic royal prattle: "There's no art / To find the mind's construction in the face."

The role of Malcolm, Duncan's true heir and the agent of healing, is acted by Jerry Gill whose gravity grows as his character's authority rises to restore.

Thriving on the demands of repertory, Jeffrey T. Heyer in the role of Lennox affords several substantive moments in the play's development.

James Brady as Ross effectively renders such eloquence as: "...cruel are the times, when we are traitors / And do not know ourselves; when we hold rumor / From what we fear, yet know not what we fear, / But float upon a wild and violent sea..."

James Affinito's work as Fleance and messenger to Lady Macduff is indicative of the seriousness of the many cast members who lend their talents to this multifaceted production.

They who jolt

But it is Stephen Moorer in company with Kevin Nolan Caston and Misty Dawn Sherman who (witches) virtually steal the show and introduce the most jolting contemplations. Serving as dancing demons and elsewhere popping up as phallocentric porter, dissembling doctor, malicious messenger, attendants at large and small, these three truly accomplish a tour de force.

Jazz Tides

By John Detro

Like a champ

JIMMY LYONS signals that he'll go out like a champ. There's bound to be strong feeling as Monterey Jazz Festival's founder approaches his 35th and final edition at our fairgrounds this weekend (9/18-20). But sadness doesn't enter the baritone voice of the former San Francisco radio host.

"(Wife) Laurel and I found a nice little retirement house right on the water at Morro Bay," the 75-year-old Jimmy says calmly. "The difference in our financial state will take some adjusting. I think we'll be all right. There's always something that an imaginative man can do. Right now, I'm concentrating on the festival."

He fires up another Camel. Then: "The (talent) lineup looks great this year and that makes me glad. The weather's beautiful right now. All we can do is hope that the clear skies hold. And that's it. I guess there's nothing else on my mind. We'll move down to Morro Bay after this party's over and live life peacefully."

Arena stars

Lyons and the fest's new general manager — Tim Jackson — put together one of the strongest rosters in memory for the main stage. Tim handled Friday and Saturday nights while Jimmy booked the closing Sunday evening show. Overall, it's a creative balance of older giants and fiery younger players.

Friday night — Roy Hargrove Quintet with the superb Antonio Hart on alto sax, Cuban trumpet star Arturo Sandoval who sought political asylum for himself and family two years ago, Yellowjackets with recent addition Bob Mintzer on reeds, Miles Davis Tribute. This latter gathers great players who worked with Miles: Herbie Hancock, Wayne Shorter, Ron Carter, Wallace Roney, Tony Williams.

Saturday blues afternoon — Charlie Musselwhite with Luther Tucker and Ron Thompson, Katie Webster plus the Vasti Jackson Band, Junior Wells, Buddy Guy.

Saturday night — Group fronted by brilliant pianist Billy Childs, Betty Carter and her trio. The Quartet (Kenny Burrell, Jimmy Smith, Grady Tate, Stanley Turrentine). Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra performing the music of Duke Ellington.

Orchestra conductor David Berger will have such stars as Wynton Marsalis and Sir Roland Hanna reacting to the baton along with Ellington alumni: Britt Woodman and Art Baron (trombones), Bill Easley and Norris Turney (saxophones).

"We don't try to play the music exactly like it sounds on the recordings," says Berger. "We try to capture its spirit. If we were playing with Duke, he'd want us to find our own personalities in the music."

Sunday afternoon — Winners in the annual High School Competition. Rio Americano High School Band, El Camino High Combo, Folsom High Jazz Choir. Brandford Marsalis Trio.

Sunday night — Dave Brubeck Quartet, Modern Jazz Quartet, Gerry Mulligan Quartet, Dizzy Gillespie being Diz, All-Star Jam Session. The latter claims Louis Bellson, George Bohanon on trombone, Tee Carson (piano), John Faddis (trumpet), Bruce Forman (guitar), Slide Hampton (trombone), John Handy (alto sax), John Heard (bass), Red Holloway (tenor sax).

San Francisco PR man Ernie Byle chaired the Jimmy Lyons Celebration Committee and contacted a good many heavyweights from MJF's past. Those who can show up will cause gasps of surprise as they pop out at various times.

Jimmy Lyons.

Grounds admission

Grounds admission tickets cost $15 (Friday night) and $20 (all day and all night Saturday or Sunday). They'll be available at the fairgrounds box office and give access to the colorful booth action, jazz photo shows (see separate story this edition), jazz programming at Garden Stage and Night Club.

These lineups have run more than once in this space. And printed lists always are available at the MJF offices. Let me simply note the acts which will have me cantering between arena and the other two venues:

Bluesman Willie and The South Street Runners with singer Yolanda Briggs (Saturday afternoon Garden Stage), Ed Kelly Trio (Saturday night Garden Stage), New World Trio with violinist India Cooke and cellist Kash Killian and drummer Eddie Marshall (Sunday evening Garden Stage), fine vocalist Nancy King with Glen Moore of the band Oregon on bass (Sunday evening Garden Stage).

Susan Muscarella/Paul Contos Quartet (Friday Night Club), Cal Tjader Alumni Band called Radcliffe (Friday Night Club), singer Kitty Margolis with Dick Hindman Trio (Saturday Night Club), Eddie Marshall Band (Sunday Night Club), Larry Vuckovich International Multicultural Quintet (Sunday Night Club).

Pianists Muscarella and Hindman must be heard. Most of Nancy King's tunes are written by Moore and his lyricist wife Samantha. (Check out their witty and haunting Potato Radio CD from the Justice label. With Bennie Wallace on tenor.)

The 1992 fest's first notes will rise from the John Cortes Quintet on the Garden Stage at 6 p.m. Friday. This unit brings forth burning trumpet man Oscar Williams and deserves much recognition.

Re: Tim

Imagine yourself in Jimmy's position. From that viewpoint, it should be noted that Tim Jackson has conducted himself in an admirable manner.

Tim has moved with both courtesy and efficiency, listening, reading the signals, opening up the MC chores so that Jimmy wouldn't be limited to a Sunday night presence. And Tim has worked out of his office at Kuumbwa Jazz Center, respecting Jimmy's traditional space at the fairgrounds.

Transitions can be difficult. It's to Tim's everlasting credit that he approached the situation with his heart at the ready as well as his sharp intellect.

Witches romp...

So festooned and choreographed are their ludicrous and antic enticements to evil that they call to mind the very marketable appeal of Klingon vessels, Darth Vader masks, Decepticons, Skeletor, Shredder, and the like. The bad guys get the juicy parts.

In our world of Nintendo intentions, unmasking the faces of evil reveals nothing more than smiling jelly devils: Tweek or be tweeked; three direct hits and you're gone; poof; you're history. The technology of virtual reality promises to erase the boundaries between display screen icons and mortal enemies, between tidiness and terror, appearance and apparition, without the slightest suggestion that real blood pools on the asphalt and in the hallways when uzis and handguns are discharged and that bodies disintegrate when heat-seeking missiles find their targets a thousand miles distant.

Such are the post-modern dangers that this medieval horror story mirrors for me. The final fight of Macduff and Macbeth is artfully and bloodlessly choreographed. When the bauble of Macbeth's severed head is presented, the audience laughs. Where might the meaning in all this lead?

An idiot's tale

"Tomorrow, and tomorrow, and tomorrow / Creeps in this petty pace from day to day / To the last syllable of recorded time . . . Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player, / That struts and frets his hour upon the stage / And then is heard no more. It is a tale / Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, / Signifying nothing."

Shakespeare as Deconstructionist.

A Stephen King-like charge runs through the crowd as the three wyrd folks snarl and giggle and close the show in refrain: "When shall we three meet again / In thunder, lightning, or in rain?"

Britannica
LEARNING CENTER
formerly* The Reading Game

Blaming only makes the pain go deeper. A youngster's lackluster school performance may stem from a social bind (peer pressure) or lack of confidence that fulfills its own sad prophecy. Whatever the cause, Britannica Learning Center evaluates the struggle and replies via compassionate, time-tested programs in both reading and math. On average, a 48-hour instructional plan means a full year's academic growth.

Britannica Center sets realistic goals that then are practiced a few hours per week. The atmosphere, methods and special incentives can turn previously hated studies into attractive times. (The same approach works for advancement-seeking adults too!)

One call can change lives: 372-2090. Convenient Monterey location: 200 Camino Aquajito...Suite 201. Keeping the promise since 1970.

CARMEL BOOK EMPORIUM

And the audio department delights with best-sellers read by excellent performers. "I really believe people come into a bookstore on a quest," she continues. "It's gratifying to be able to help our customers find the treasures they are seeking." The comfy coffee shop serves light lunches and desserts in addition to a fine array of espresso drinks. Book Bag

By John Detro

Valuable document

Dizzy, Duke, the Count and Me: the Story of the Monterey Jazz Festival. By Jimmy Lyons with Ira Kamin. Table book with scores of photographs, and drawings by David Stone Martin. California Living. 184 pages. $19.95.

THE TITLE refers of course to Dizzy Gillespie and Duke Ellington and Count Basie and Lyons, MJF founder and 35-year general manager who retires when this year's three-day edition ends sometime Sunday night (9/20). Duke and Captain Bill live in Godhead's Jazz Heaven. Dizzy's spokesperson says the great man will be on hand for this historic passing of the leadership baton to young Tim Jackson.

Jimmy (wife Laurel reports they'll live "near the water" of Morro Bay) leaves behind a sturdy legacy. Not the least of it is this 1978 volume which traces the family-type fest's first two decades. Kamin turned on the tape recorder, asked the right questions, drew from Lyons so many incisive Insider anecdotes that the title must be called a valuable document.

Jimmy speaking: "I danced to Basie in the '30s, met him in the '30s, used him in the army (radio) shows in the '40s. I've been a Basie fan all my life...(He) was supposed to be (at MJF) in '76 but had a heart attack on me. (He recuperated and was one of the hits of the '77 festival.) The band played well — it always does — but you miss that plink plink. Ain't the same without that lovely little round man."

And: "Someone said, 'Why don't you get some tap dancers?' So in 1973 we got Baby Lawrence, John T. McPhee, Buster Brown and Chuck Green. They were wonderful. They beat me out of $400 in hotel room bills and rented cars. And I didn't care." And: "(Duke) was a great put-on artist. He used to travel with this doctor's kit...He had yellow pills, blue pills. If you had bursitis in your left elbow, he had different color pills for it."

Big truths

The tiny tales reveal big truths about MJF's warmth and unusually good relationship with jazz giants over the years. Wondrous photos were supplied by Pete Breinig, Tom Copi, George Hall, Jim Marshall, Veryl Oakland, Seymour Rosen, Grover Sales, Jon Sievert, Bonnie Tiegel, Baron Wolman.

David Stone Martin's backstage drawings vibrate with life and intimate knowledge of the scene (he did those classic album covers for Jazz at the Philharmonic some 35 years ago). Martin passed away a few months back; there'll be no more of the tough and delicate work;—so this book's service as a depository takes on even greater significance.

Included here as well is a name-by-name record of all MJF bookings (1958-1977). You'll find prose pieces by Elliott Horne, Ralph Gleason, Leonard Feather, Sales, Richard Hadlock, Phil Elwood, John L. Wasserman. The late Ralph helped Jimmy develop the fest vision; their friendship survived the regularly inspired Gleason's later criticism of various aspects: "Music, not money, should be the first concern of a music festival."

Laurel Lyons has taken charge of distributing the remaining books. She may be contacted through the MJF office (373-3366). Meanwhile, I'll take from between those covers a Martin portrait. Dave Brubeck will be at Monterey Jazz Festival this weekend:

On the gallery level are four sleeping rooms plus kitchen with breakfast area and dining room, all tastefully appointed in the Japanese tradition of beautiful simplicity. There are two decks, one off the dining room and the other off the living room, and both look out to a calm and restful garden surrounded by a variety of lovely trees. $525,000.

The house has been freshly painted inside and out, so it sparkles. Well priced at $265,000.
